

Stories of kindness, amid Sandy's devastation

“As the water rose near the top, I was carrying our most precious things to the second floor — my grandmother’s kitchen table, my great-grandmother’s linens, the portrait of my nieces that my sister painted ... I was very close to losing everything. Many of them did. I guess I was very sensitive to their plight.”

— MICHAEL O'DONNELL, of Fairfield, who spent hours ferrying people to and from their ravaged homes.

Lights in the Storm

