JIM SHEA Get the duct tape: A man and his broken-in wallet should never be parted

y wallet suffered a major blowout the other day.

Thankfully, no one was injured. What actually caused the seam to burst and the contents to spill out is under investigation.

Terrorism has been ruled out.

Still, the experience was emotional. My wallet and I have been together for a long time, through hot and cold, wet and dry, good times and bad emissions.

It never complained. It stoically hung in there storing my plastic, and cash, and receipts, and those mysterious lumps of paper fused into impenetrable wads.

It could have been worse, I suppose. I could have lost my wallet or had it stolen.

If your wallet is lost or stolen, life as you know it is pretty much on hold. You spend all your waking hours trying to replace things, and all your non-waking hours having nightmares about what the person now in possession of your wallet is doing during all his waking hours.

And that's not the worst part.

Losing possession of your wallet also means a trip to the Department of Motor Vehicles.

At the risk of overstating what a personal appearance at the DMV entails, let me suggest that in lieu of obtaining a new license you might be better off just selling your car.

In terms of dealing with the damaged wallet itself, I had two options.

The first was to buy a new wallet.

The problem here is that it takes a long time to break in a new wallet. It has to get comfortable in your back pocket while developing a working relationship with the corresponding cheek. There is nothing worse than a wallet and cheek that rub each other the wrong way.

The second option, obviously, was duct tape.

I went the duct tape route. I am a huge fan of duct tape. In my view nothing has been more critical to maintaining the infrastructure of this country than a simple roll of duct tape.

Structurally, my ducttaped wallet is sound.

Aesthetically, maybe not so much. But then a wallet is kind of like wearing a stained shirt under a sweater who's going to see it, right?

My wife thinks my wallet is an embarrassment.

I'm not surprised. Women don't have the same deep appreciation for duct tape. And they certainly don't get the bond between a man and his wallet.

In fairness, men lack a similar understanding of the connection between a woman and her handbag. Um, make that handbags. Women often have almost as many handbags as they do shoes. I'm not sure how many handbags my wife has accumulated, but I think it is safe to say that a significant portion of our net worth is tied up in them.

While women have an affinity for handbags, they don't seem to form lasting, wallet-esque relationships with them. It's more love 'em and leave 'em.

As for functionality, a man can get everything essential to his daily existence into a three- by four-inch wallet. Women, however, need something the size of a Mini Cooper with straps to accomplish the same thing. What do they store in there? I have no idea. Here, do know about women's handbags: One, they don't like you rummaging around inside however, are the few things I them uninvited. Two, everything appears to be loose. Three, although rubble seems more organized, a handbag's owner can immediately locate anything she is looking for by simply feeling around. (The only time this rule does not hold true is if you are standing outside on a frigid winter night and she is looking for the car keys.) Four, the farther down you stick your hand into a woman's handbag, the more humid it becomes.

Five, in the entire history of women's handbags, one has never been repaired with duct tape.

LOVING THE FROMAGE

CHEESE SHOP TEACHES THE FINE POINTS OF FOODIES' CONTINUING OBSESSION

By Rosemarie T. Anner

evin DeFreitas is deadly serious as he cuts a wedge of Bayley Hazen Blue by sight with impressive accuracy.

"Cheese is a spiritual journey," he says to a customer in the Greenwich Cheese Company's shop, while wrapping the piece in brown paper. It's a journey of vast exploration, he continues without looking up as he puts the knife down and reaches in the case for Reading, a semisoft cow's milk cheese that imparts a hint of funkiness. The customer, a native of Belgium, says she plans to make fondue with it.

I didn't fall in love with cheese until I moved to Greenwich and discovered a cheese shop on The Avenue. I remember an enthusiastic young man named Ken Skovron, who would suggest I try something new every time I popped in. Today, Skovron is proprietor in his own emporium, Darien Cheese & Fine Foods. DeFreitas, who apprenticed under Skovron, manages the Greenwich Cheese Company for owners Chris Palumbo and Laura Downey. The shop sits in a small stretch on the Post Road in what locals call "the Hub." The cheese landscape has changed dramatically since De-Freitas first took up the monger's craft. Wellbeing To eat, or not to eat, that is the question

By Amanda Cuda

A 2013 study linked drinking more than 28 cups of coffee a week with a higher risk of death in people younger than 55. But two years later, a study came out showing that people who drank coffee regularly were less likely to die prematurely from heart disease, diabetes and other causes than those who didn't quaff the caffeinated beverage.

Meanwhile, research has shown dark chocolate has all kinds of benefits, from reducing cancer and heart disease risk to elevating mood. But there's also research showing the bittersweet treat can trigger migraine headaches, increase your chance of kidney stones and cause other problems, as well.

And then there's red wine. There have been studies proclaiming numerous benefits from drinking this elixir of the grape, such as protection from certain cancers, defense against dental disease and a lower risk of heart disease. But there's also research stating that drinking red wine can increase the risk of breast cancer and, of course, potentially lead to alcoholism.

It seems no matter what food or beverage, there are studies touting it as a culinary savior, while other research vilifies it as a health hazard. Wine, eggs, tea — even kale — have been the subject of contradictory studies. With so much information out there, how can anyone tell whether a food is good or had for them?

HAS CHANGED DRAMATICALLY SINCE DEFREITAS FIRST TOOK UP THE MONGER'S CRAFT.

country every year, and just as many cheese specialty shops are springing up to meet the demands of consumers. We know who makes Humboldt Fog (Cypress Grove in California) and what wine to serve with it (Sauvignon Blanc is a good pairing). More and more we shun shrink wrap for unbound offerings in the cheese case of boutiques like this cheese shop.

DeFreitas spiels what a particular cheese tastes like – buttery – as you roll a tiny sample round your mouth. He selects another from the case of about 100 cheeses, 50 percent of them American made, and continues his recitation. The avalanche of adjectives comes easily to him: mild, nutty, tangy, barny, pungent, musty, earthy, mushroomy, stinky, gamy, floral, oozy, soothing. Hard rind or washed. Semisoft or firm. Who knew you could compile a dictionary just by describing one food group?

"We are, first, a shop," says Palumbo, a former caterer, who may still conjure up a meal or two at his original cheese shop location in Fairfield.

"We seek cheeses that are small batch and handmade. All our cheeses are artisanal, made by small farms. And second," he continues, "we're about education."

For example, he points out, people don't realize that cheese is as seasonal as produce. "When the weather is cold, alpine and Swiss are perfect; when the weather is warm, goat cheese and triple crèmes are at their prime."

Palumbo turns to a woman purveyor who has brought toffees and mini cookies for him to taste in the hopes he will stock them in his shop. He tastes, he likes, he buys.

"Every transaction with a customer is an education for them," he continues the conversation. "There is a rapport that develops across the counter resulting in trust between monger and shoppers. They have to learn their palate."

You're hooked, and intimidated, but help is on the way. The shop offers night classes where you'll learn why a particular cheese tastes the way it does, what are the best wine or beer pairings, why cheese is good for you and why cost is so high. This month there is a Tuesday, May 24, class that will challenge your taste buds of four cheeses and four wines. A focus on French cheeses is cast for May 31. There is even a charcuterie class planned, where you'll learn all about the sweet soppressata from Fra' Mani. At about $50 a class taught by both Downey and Palumbo (there are two to three a month), this cheese school will take you from acolyte to deacon in one year.

"Cheese is made from four things," says professor DeFreitas, "milk, culture, salt, rennet. Anything else is probably not good for you."

Preparing two very large boards, each with four cheeses for a customer's evening party, he grabs a bunch of purple grapes from the fridge behind him and places them next to Clothbound cheddar. Nearby, a staff member is putting the finishing touches, a fresh lime leaf, in a gift package a woman is sending to her mother in Tennessee for Mother's Day.

A nifty concept is the shop's on-the-go boxes that typically boast two to three cheeses, a dry salami, crackers, nuts and dried fruit. They're perfect as hostess gifts, a Parisian lunch or as a presupper course on the patio as the sun slips away in the western sky.

Augmenting cheese boards is easy at this boutique shop. Shelves are stocked with mustards, chutneys, jams and preserves. There are crackers and baguettes trucked in daily from New York's Sullivan Street Bakery. Artisanal chocolates from as far away as Vietnam and as close by as Brooklyn. Vats of olives and tart cornichons. Balsamic vinegars, as well as olive oils and honeys. And while you're pondering choices, have DeFreitas whip up a grilled cheese sandwich to go with tomato soup for your lunch later.

food is good or bad for them?

It can be difficult, says Catherine Staffieri, registered dietitian with Greenwich Hospital. "(Nutrition) is such an evolving form of scientific research," she says. "It's like space — we're learning more about it every day. The field is growing so much and there's so much research."

That large volume of research increases the possibility of contradictory studies, she says. But as Staffieri points out, some of the research isn't entirely reliable, which can add to the confusion. She says sometimes a headline will trumpet some great benefit or drawback of a food, but a closer look at the research will show that the study was small, or only performed on animals or some other detail that calls its credibility into question. "I always say look beyond the headlines," Staffieri says. "You really have to try and see what the research is and where it comes from."

Linzy Unger, a registered dietitian at the New York-based Hospital for Special Surgery (which has offices in Stamford), agrees. "It's important that people really look at the source of the study," she says. For instance, if a study funded by a company that makes artificial sweetener touts the benefits of those products, Unger says to be skeptical.

Experts agree the best tools for deciding whether to consume a certain food or beverage are the guidance of a nutritional professional, and your own common sense. "People can talk to a dietitian to help them separate the scientific studies from the nonscientific," Unger says.

Maybe the best rule of thumb, according to the nutrition professionals, is to take everything in moderation. "The problems come when you take things to the extreme," says Sarah Lombino, clinical nutrition manager at Bridgeport Hospital. "These studies come out saying that eggs are good for you, and people go out and eat four eggs a day."

Eating that many eggs can cancel out their benefits, she says, and the same goes for coffee and chocolate and anything that can have both health benefits and health drawbacks. Dark chocolate, for instance, has flavanols, which Lombino says can support heart health, but probably not if you eat a whole box.

"Maybe eat one one-ounce piece a day," she says. "And look at the label to make sure the first ingredient is cocoa and not sugar."

Fresh style complements store's vintage past

By Christina Hennessy

s Serena Dugan leans against the door frame, her eyes take a sweep of the expansive foyer. To her left is a vestige of a time gone by, to her right is a scene of modern interior design. It is by happenstance that she is positioned in the center, but it is an apt placement for this California-based entrepreneur.

Recently, the upscale lifestyle and home décor business she co-founded with Lily Kanter, Serena & Lily, opened in Westport. It comes after a year of renovations transforming the 1889 Kemper-Gunn House, a nearly 130-year-old Queen Anne Victorian, into a contemporary showcase. The company's products, from accents to furniture, are featured in a show-house setting throughout three floors. Dugan, the chief design officer, was inspired by the challenge of bringing two eras together.

"I was curious about a historic Queen Anne Victorian, not so much in how we could restore it to its former luster, but update it in a way that is the new modern. Modern doesn't honor this architecture, but Serena & Lily's update, or infusion, or incorporation into this house was an intriguing idea. I loved the idea of that softer California edge redefining historical," she says.

A hand-carved staircase, window casings and stained-glass windows inside the building were spared. The facade was not changed, save for a new paint job. The elements within signal subtle shifts in creating a fresh look on classic design. The brand's Tucker chairs, a spin on the staid Windsor chair, are created with a more petite profile and come in colors that pop. They are even employed to create a kitchen art installation in the store, a modern peg-rail storage solution that updates Shaker simplicity.

While the West Coast was the initial inspiration, the company sees an easy transition to the East Coast. Colors and patterns are as pleasing to eyes that look over Long Island Sound as to those who view the Pacific Ocean. The trick is providing enough inspirations — there are 300 swatches in the store's second-floor design shop — to create custom bedding, upholstery, carpeting and window treatments. "It's like a candy store," says Aaron Mutscheller, chief brand officer, of the design shop, which boasts rows and rows of original design swatches. "It depends on how adventurous you want to be."

The brand carries with it a sense of whimsy. A colonial-style fireplace looks modern under a mantle of modern, abstract art.

Those in the business of preserving homes say there is more interest in teaming preservation with contemporary design, whether for personal preference or practicality. There are more than 1,500 historic homes in Westport. Establishing an open floor plan in an old home is an interesting challenge, and can pay off in an entirely custom look, says Jud Aley, owner of the Westport-based building contracting firm R.J. Aley. "When you are working with an existing footprint, it is my personal feeling that you may end up with a new house inside, but you have more character than a house built from the ground up. It forces the architect to be a bit more creative in design, which leads to more interesting spaces and unique solutions."

Looking for those idiosyncratic combinations is an adventure that Dugan enjoys. Serena & Lily has opened stores in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Wainscott, N.Y., each different from the others. "Every region has its own dialect, and it's almost a design challenge and intriguing for us to merge our brand and our fundamental sensibility with the aesthetic of a region or an area," she says.

Exploring Westport, she found a common thread in the care people took in their homes, a "tastefulness" that transcended era or style. Here, the company will see how the blend of California casual with classic New England sensibilities creates a whole new dialect. It starts with product design and ends with how the customer uses it in his or her home.

"Everyone sees something of him or herself in what they buy. That is why I design; it's not just my need to express myself, but knowing those ingredients make someone happy and allows them to express themselves is joyous."

TRANSFORMER

Restorer helps fix flea market finds

By Bob Horton

M ark DeVito is a craftsman with deep roots in the early 20th century heyday of Stamford's furniture industry, when its skilled carpenters, upholsterers and designers produced some of the finest pieces in the U.S.

DeVito's father, Ralph, was one of those artisans. And Mark himself started making furniture alongside his father, who opened his own business, Raphael's Furniture Restoration, in 1959.

"I was tying springs and stuffing down feathers when I was only 7 years old," DeVito says, standing at one of the long, wooden workbenches in his Glenbrook Road shop. "These benches are from the original Danersk Furniture factory on Dock Street, where my father worked." In a small office off the work floor, DeVito displays memorabilia from industrialera Stamford, including several large portfolio books of original designs for the 1,200 different pieces that made Danersk an industry leader.

"I remember going into the Danersk factory with my father. I think he was the only one there who still had all his fingers. There was an older carpenter turning wood on a lathe and smoking a cigarette as he stood amid piles of sawdust up to his knees. There were craters burned into the piles where he flicked his cigarette butts," DeVito says.

Raphael encouraged his son to stay away from the furniture business, and he did try his hand at electronics. But the pull of working with wood was too much to resist, and the younger DeVito returned to Raphael's, which he took over when his father retired.

At its peak, Raphael's had four showrooms at the Stamford Antique Center and a workshop on Atlantic Street. But then tastes in furniture changed.

"It all happened after 9/11," says the furniture restorer, who has been plying his craft for more than 50 years. "Tastes changed. Suddenly everyone was collecting midcentury modern. Formal furniture was no longer in style. They started calling it 'brown furniture' because of the stained wood."

DeVito struggled to keep his father's legacy alive. "I tried to save Dad's business, but all I did was go into a lot of debt." He gave up his space in downtown Stamford, laid off most of his workers, and tried to sell his considerable inventory of "brown" furniture.

"I ended up giving three van loads away to the Laurel House thrift shop. And two more van loads ended up in the landfill," says DeVito. But during those last years in downtown, a customer found Mark, and he started a new chapter, adapting his skills to the 21st century world of media and entertainment.

Lara Spencer, a co-host of "Good Morning America" and a flea market aficionado, brought some pieces to Raphael, and Mark worked his restorative magic. Several years later, Spencer started a new show, "Flea Market Flip," and asked Mark to be one of the experts who work with the show's contestants.

"Mark is truly an artist in every sense of the word," Spencer says. "He has been restoring and reimagining my flea market finds for more than a decade. His attention to detail and workmanship are truly remarkable, but Mark is also a great guy. He has talked me out of putting money into pieces that were beyond repair, and given me great ideas on how to reinvent some of the finds our contestants buy on 'Flea Market Flip.' "

Spencer is executive producer and hosts the show that runs on the Great American Country channel, part of HGTV. Each 30-minute episode is built on two strong human compulsions, creativity and competitiveness. Contestants are paired into teams, with each team set free at a flea market with $500 spending money. Their goal is to purchase several bargains that can be combined and repurposed. The team whose new pieces command the highest price at a subsequent flea market wins the competition.

DeVito works with one of the teams to help it realize its vision of, say, creating a new outdoor dining table from a crusty old bicycle and salvaged wooden table top.

"I didn't know what to expect from being on TV," the furniture restorer says. "I just showed up and they put a mic on me. But I had played bass in a band, so I was used to embarrassing myself in front of an audience.

"(The contestants) tell me what they want the piece to be, and I try to make it happen," DeVito says of his TV role. In one of the first shows, a team came to him with a 19th century pill-top pedestal table and a cheap octagonal, plastic mirror that they wanted mounted on top. "I said, 'Are you crazy?' And I talked them out of it and saved the antique." The team lost the competition, but DeVito says Spencer really appreciated him saving the antique.

"But I felt bad that the team lost. So I learned my lesson. Several episodes later, a team came to me with a beautiful bird's-eye maple vanity that it wanted me to cut off to make a bench. It was one of the most beautiful bird's-eye maple pieces I'd ever seen, but I did what they wanted," DeVito says. "Lara came to me after the show and asked, 'What happened to saving the antiques?,' but when I explained why I had done it, she completely understood."

While DeVito has been a hit on the show, he can still safely walk the streets of Stamford without being recognized. And he still labors most days at Raphael's Furniture Restoration, located in a small space in one of the old brick warehouses that comprise the Glenbrook Industrial Park.

"I scaled back the business. Now it is just me and one other person. And I'm making a profit for the first time in years."

DeVito knows better than anyone that tastes change, and he has started to see a rebirth of interest in "brown" furniture. "Designers use them now as accent pieces to complement the midcentury furniture, which is very sleek and has a lot of curves and bright colors. The wood furniture I restore makes a nice counterpoint to that style."

DeVito does not long for the days of a bigger business. "I prefer the fewer headaches I have now," DeVito says. But as one looks at the old wood furniture that covers every available foot in his workshop, and even hangs from the rafters, one can only hope that some young person comes along and feels the pull of the wood to keep the tradition alive.

foremost protege, Soviet chess emerged - captivating, among others, Bobby Fischer.

Inspired by the play of Chig-

As Botvinnik later observed, Fischer — who absorbed Russian chess materials with a remarkable passion and relish - was essentially a player of the Soviet School.

What caused this remarkable upsurge in the game?

The time of Chigorin was a time of war and revolution.

His chess as did his successors reflected those dynamics.

The dynamics were nowhere fiercer then in Leningrad which was horrifically assailed by the Nazi assault. The Hero City lost 50 percent of its population.

Rising from the rubble of Leningrad were Botvinnik, Boris Spassky and Viktor Korchnoi, three of the most resilient players of the century.

Botvinnik and Spassky became world champions, Korchnoi missed the title by a single game.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 22): The most attractive people are the ones who know and embrace their so-called "faults" as you will in the weeks to come. What you once thought was a detriment will earn you money, friends and more in the next 10 weeks. You'll travel in style through September and upgrade vour domestic scene in December. Cancer and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 29, 44, 19 and 33.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have a plan B and a plan C, but keep planning anyway. Go past the plan-G stages. There are so many variables you don't know about yet, but the more you plan, the better prepared you'll be.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If all you do today is find more ways that don't work, you'll be closer to solving your problem. Bonus points if you keep track of those non-effective methods and resolve not to repeat them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): Of course it's a compliment when people borrow from you. But when they don't return your goods, or don't credit vou, the compliment feels more backhanded than anything. Just know that you're admired.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): You don't always have to fight for what's yours. Most of the time, it's given freely. However, it helps if you're ready for that kind of fight. It reinforces the boundary, commands respect and discourages challengers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might have talked your way into a situation, but you'll have to listen your way out (or further in, whichever you prefer): Lead with the chief assets: empathy, patience and compassion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Those who tend to be critical of you will be even more so today. Protect yourself first. Then you can start to think about how to best use the opportunity of a critical eye turned your direction.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): You'll have time to develop your ideas, but not too much time, which will ultimately be the saving grace that keeps you at top efficiency. The deadline will force you to focus on what's important.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): When life gets too heavy, the air signs (Gemini, Libra and Aquarius) will offer a fresh approach - a booster rocket to help you escape gravity's clutches, solve the problem and move on instead of over-thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): As for the old baggage, there's no time for an auction, a garage sale or Craigslist. Kick it to the curb. The faster you move on, the better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The very nature of tenacity is that it's rewarded in sore muscles, sweaty clothes and general bewilderment before it's ever rewarded in tangible results. It's a word for the strong.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Just because the information is overwhelmingly positive doesn't mean it's inaccurate, improbable or unrealistic. Sometimes the very best news is the news in its purest and truest form.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What would the state of things be if no one ever took responsibility for things that were not, technically, their responsibility? You know better, and you'll do better, pushing the bar higher for all.

his first questionable move - I can't call it a mistake when he jumped to three diamonds in response to North's double. Since Louie had a spade stopper and a source of winners in diamonds, he might have bid 2NT or 3NT; the nine-trick game would have been easy. Over three diamonds, North might have cue-bid three spades, urging Louie to try 3NT if he had a spade stopper. But North bid what was in front of his nose.

Against five diamonds. West led a trump, and Louie saw that he needed to set up the clubs - without letting East get in to lead a spade. Louie tried to play safe: He won the first trump in his hand, led a club to the ace, got back with a trump and led a second club. If West had played the queen, Louie would have played low from dummy.

As it was, West followed with the jack, so Louie took the king and led a third club. He was broadsided when East won and led a spade. Down one.

Louie could have done better. Since West's opening bid marks him with the king of hearts, Louie can lead the queen at Trick Two and duck when West covers. Louie wins the next trump, discards a club on the ace of hearts, takes the A-K of clubs and ruffs a club. He can then lead a trump to dummy and discard two spades on the good clubs, losing one spade at the end.
